Reviews

This pdf is indeed gripping and interesting. It is definitely simplistic but shocks within the 50 percent of your book. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

THE NATURE AND PATHOGENESIS OF ESSENTIAL EPILEPSY. Two fundamental principles were brought forward in my first thesis on the nature and pathogenesis of epilepsy: First, that there is invariably present an epileptic constitution or make-up in those individuals who later develop essential epilepsy. The nucleus of this personality defect is a temperament of extreme hypersensitiveness and egotism and all that these two main characteristics entail. This defect in character is not to be taken in any narrow or moralistic sense, but is to be considered as a temperamental defect in a broad, biologic view, a personality-defect which makes its possessor incapable of social adaptation in its best setting and which, if it remain uncorrected, renders the individual entirely inadequate to make a normal adult life. Secondly, that the seizure phenomenon in essential epilepsy is a direct outcome of the inability of such persons to subordinate their individualistic tendencies to those of the so-called social demands and constitute a reaction away from the difficulties in a loss of consciousness. In the most badly adapted individuals, in which the temperamental defect is also coincident with intellectual and somatic defects of a pronounced type, one may note that even the minimum of environmental stress may seemingly be lacking, and yet a steadily progressive epileptic state persists. In such the epilepsy attains its maximum frequency and severity. In other individuals less afflicted with an adaptational handicap, the disease of epilepsy does not appear until adolescence,...
