THE SHOES OF HAPPINESS THE EVENTFUL STORY OF THE SULTAN MAHMOUD AND OF HALIL, THE GRAND VIZIER I It was green of April, it was morn In Istamboul on the Golden Horn, Where down the hill and the crooked shore The cypress sorrows evermore. The white Seraglio s marble piles Gleamed ghostly down the silver miles. There mosque and palace and grove and fort Neighbor in many a glorious court. Three are the portals that shut it in, Hushed and afar from the world s great din; Nine are the nightingale gardens there That hang all night in a moon-white air; Fifty the fountains of silver leap, Whose sound is soft as the listless flow Of streams that forever linger and go Down delicate, dream-far valleys of sleep. At the heart of it all, like a lily s gold, Is a gorgeous chamber,...
