One sentence, accurately written, is worth pages full of mistakes. Most mistakes are the results of careless habits. Bend all your energies straight toward the correction of such habits. Stop in a reading lesson, and ask pupils to write one sentence about that which they have read.--Wisconsin Journal of Education. Reading. In reading, in the higher grades, the text-book should be studied. A few of the best pieces should be selected; they should be critically examined and their meaning made clear to the pupils. The proper rendering should be insisted on; and the elocution should be made to voice the sense. This is drill. It is no objection that sometimes the pieces are difficult for the pupils. No one advances...
