Excerpt: . then the devil whispered in his ear to get rid of her. Well, said Sir Walter; what must be, must be. Come into my boat, and I ll row you across. And so she did; and when he got into the middle of the channel, he ketches her and throws her over into the salt sea. At the moment he heard a loud laugh, and soon after a noise like as if ten thousand cats were fighten. Terrified out of his life the knight rowed to shore, and hastened to his castle; but for the sowl of him he could get neither peace nor ease, for a guilty conscience is a troublesome companion. Next day, lest he should be suspected of the murdher, he goes to Conagh s house, but found nothen there but an ould uglylooken black cat. Poor puss! says he....
